Renaissance spook cover. Obviously.

Published by Black Hill Press (now 1888) in March of 2015, Renaissance Spook tells the story of a disgruntled ex-lawyer turned into a disgruntled ghost. Zack, a family man and an unhappy attorney, is cursed with a long life of bad luck. Even in the last moment of his life he finds himself plagued by the cruel and unusual—death by squirrels. However, he ends up in neither heaven nor hell, but in an alternate world where directors and production assistants control the lives of humans for the amusement of a celestial audience. Then, finding himself in the employ of the very being responsible for his comedic demise, Zack must decide between moving on or living as a ghost and puppeteer among humans. Trouble brews when Zack discovers himself, and his family, at the center of a deadly cinematic plot twist between two feuding directors. Only Zack can save his family. The question is, can he break his streak of bad luck?

“Renaissance Spook is a humorous, solidly entertaining novel with surprising emotional depth and the kind of careful, transparent craftsmanship that keeps the reader turning the pages to find out what happens next.”

“Fun, surprising, witty.....a great read!”

“Love this book! Easy, funny, enjoyable read.”

About the Author

Jason Pyrz (Peerz) was born into the unfortunate situation of having a family name with no true vowels. Having lived most of his early childhood in the near southwest suburbs of Chicago, nothing exciting really happened to him with the exception of the time he got to shake Mr. T’s hand, or when he shared an elevator with Michael Douglas. Jason is a recovering trial attorney and currently resides in Naperville, IL with his wife, Sue, and their daughter, Elizabeth Darcy – yes, named after the character from Pride and Prejudice.

About the Publisher

1888, formerly Black Hill Press, is an independent publisher based in Southern California. 1888/BHP releases a collection of novels and novellas on a quarterly basis, with each collection of three tied together by a common cover artist. Other publications include reprints of 19th-century dime novels and an annual collection of short stories, The Cost of Paper, which can be downloaded for free as an eBook or bought as a paperback for the cost of printing. 1888/BHP also hosts the annual Summer Writing Project and the Plaza Literary Prize – nationwide initiatives that bring thousands of authors together. The 1888/BHP family includes artists whose work has been featured in international campaigns and famous murals in cities like Chicago, and award winning authors whose works have been published by larger houses like Harper Collins and whose film rights have been purchased by HBO.
